

accept Lafone's (who is one of the leading Wharfingers) suggestion, that is, six-pence an hour to be the minimum, and other concessions. Seven hundred strikers resumed work this morning. The men on the other wharves will of necessity follow suit.

Details of the accident to the Shah's train in Russia have just been received. The train was derailed while on the top of the embankment. The Shah jumped out to save himself, and fell into an expanse of mud, in which he was considered to be in momentary danger.

Mr. Lafone, the head of a leading firm of Wharfingers, has conceded the terms asked for by the Dock Labourers. The Strike Committee have authorised the men, with the exception of the lightermen, to resume work to-day on whatever terms are offered.

A Royal Warrant has been issued reducing the number of General Officers in conformity with Mr. Stanhope's scheme. After the reduction, the maximum number will be General, with three Generals of the Indian Staff Corps, twenty-five Lieutenant-Generals, and eighty-eight Major-Generals, including those of the Indian Staff Corps. Until December, 1890, all the establishments of General Officers will remain unchanged.

RAILWAY PROGRESS IN CHINA.

Regular four miles auster has been the policy of the Chinese in railway matters, and the iron-road is once more in full bloom. The resolution to proceed with railway works has been for some time firmly established in the Imperial Council, but for reasons alluded to in our last week's issue the necessary precautions, as for an army entering an unknown country, have caused delay in the execution of the project. Now all objections having been considered, and trusty men put in charge of the enterprise, the Government has ordered a rapid forward movement. The line from Lu K'ou-ching, which is practically from Hankow to Hankow, is to be proceeded with at once, and an Imperial Edict authorizing the proposal made by the Admiralty has already been issued. The northern section of the line will be under the supreme responsibility of the Viceroy Li, the Managing Director, to call them, being Chou Fu, former Hui-kwan Tao-tai of Tientsin, and Pan, formerly Director of the Eastern Arsenal. The middle, or Honan section, will be under the Futai Ni. The southern section will be under the responsibility of the Viceroy Chang, and as the whole scheme is based on his memorial and has been viewed as a scheme by the only Chinese officials who have had any experience, more than his share of the burden will probably be thrown on him. For one thing, the raising of funds is not unlikely to be left to a large extent in his hands, and it will perhaps afford some grim satisfaction in certain quarters to see this stern denouncer of foreign aid obliged, as a first step, to negotiate a foreign loan, thus admitting the failure of his own crude financial scheme before it has even been tried.

The position of the railway question in China becomes more and more interesting, and already it is sufficiently advanced to afford a retrospect, which may furnish some data for forecasting the future history of railway work. It may be noted in passing, that persuasion is no longer needed to convince the Imperial Government of the necessity for railways; they are red-hot on the subject, and it is rather the skill on the coach wheels than the whip applied to the flanks of the horses that will be required for the next ten years. The Imperial Government have grown accustomed to homilies from all quarters on the advantages of railways, and the missionaries of progress might have dropped out their platitudes for another generation without cutting the slumbers of the Palace. But when all the preachers in the world would not accomplish has been effected by the action of a distant power. The true father of Chinese Railways is named Antenneff.

The progress of the northern railway system, though not rapid has been varied by incidents which bring into view the personalities and the influences which may be expected to operate in the further development of the enterprise. The short line between the T'ungshan colliery and the Lutai Canal, the re-embryonic cell of the railway organism, involved no principle beyond that of the use of steam on dry land. But when the appanage of the colliery merely. But when the extension of the line to Lutai, a further length of 23 miles, making a total of 30 miles, was determined on, the question of funds came in. At that time the T'ungshan colliery was not in such a flourishing financial condition as it is now, and the Directors were reluctant to incur fresh liabilities. At this juncture personal considerations played, as always in China, a prominent part. The most ambitious official in the province of Chihli was and is Chou Fu, and those of our readers who have a file of The Chinese Times will find his characteristics described in the number of May 18th. It was the policy of Chou Fu to make himself continuously necessary to the Viceroy by stepping into every breach, and in particular by keeping himself in the van of progress. So when difficulties were experienced in giving effect to the Viceroy's desire to push on the Lutai Railway, Chou Fu, who had sufficiently enriched himself during his occupancy of the Customs Tao-tai of Tientsin, came boldly forward and invested his own funds in the new railway. This was an act of faith and courage which fully bears out the estimate we formed of Chou Fu's character and policy; and he has been amply justified in the result. The Lutai section was scarcely made when the extension to P'ei-t'ung, then to Taku, and finally to Tientsin was ordered. The increased dimensions of the enterprise, and the impossibility of raising share capital, necessitated a loan, which was negotiated by H.E. the Viceroy, and the amount was fixed so as to cover the cost of the whole line, so that Chou Fu was able out of the proceeds to recoup himself in his somewhat venturesome outlay. The loan being made, however, and the railway opened it was soon found to be a losing concern. The net earnings, if they provided for the interest on the loan, certainly did not meet, and the outlook for the repayment of the borrowed capital was by no means bright. Hence arose the pressure for an extension of the railway into a paying district, and that was the true motive for rushing the Tientsin-Tung-chow line.

Now, however, for the first time serious opposition was met with. The T'ungshan-Tientsin section has been carried through without difficulty, because there were practically no vested interests interfered with, and because the whole district is so entirely under military occupation that the prestige of the Government is sufficient to repress any disposition to give trouble. The Tung-chow extension was of a different character. At the Tientsin end the line would have to be carried through densely occupied ground, where the interests of thousands of people were affected. The traffic, too, threatened a whole army of boatmen and carriers, and as we have seen, the various elements of the opposition found a voice potential in Peking, which, in fact, arrested the progress of the railway. There was no such serious difficulty as to the really stopped the work had the President of the Hui-kin-Yamen been, as determined as the Viceroy Li and the Marquis Tsing. But a certain point was gained by the mere agitation. The sanction and subsequent abandonment of the Tung-chow scheme enabled the Viceroy to exact, by way of compensation, the adoption by the Peking Government of the Railway Loan which he had made for the Tientsin-Tung-chow section, and hence forth both the Viceroy and his principal lieutenant, Chou Fu, stood to use a slang expression, "on velvet."

The sequel to the abandonment of the Tung-chow line was the call by the Imperial Government for reasons by the Maritime Viceroys and Governors of Provinces affected on the general question. And here the restless and incisive pen of the redoubtable Chang-Chih-tung has played a most important part. For, though his apprehension of affairs, especially foreign affairs is probably inferior to that of an average Tao-tai, and his proposal savours of the mild seclusion of the literati,—poetic, theoretical, and almost childish,—yet such is his reputation and real power of this scholar, that his memorial has carried the day against all others, notably that which is in all practical respects superior to it, the memorial of Huang, the Governor of Kiangsu.

The memorial of Chang-Chih-tung, however, is a masterpiece of political finesse,—a stronger card in China than knowledge of practical affairs. Like the memorials by which Mr. Tchevenet used to tickle the Viceroy, Chang's plays on the prejudices and the weaknesses of those in power. The Imperial Government, represented in this question by the Seventh Prince, had set its heart on railways; therefore, railways it should have. On the other hand, a powerful faction in the capital had opposed the innovation on specific grounds, and it was necessary to conciliate this party also. Much may be effected in China by a stroke of the pen, and the accomplished wielder of that instrument could hardly have found a more congenial problem on which to exercise it. The objections of the reactionaries against the construction of the Tientsin-Tung-chow line are gracefully ceded to, and that line is unreservedly condemned by Chang-Chih-tung, who, however, proposes a substitute to connect Tientsin with the capital by way of Peking Fu, at least five times the distance. The trunk line which Chang-Chih-tung proposes from Hankow to Lu K'ou-ching, evades all the obstacles imposed by the Censors, and the pill is skillfully guided by the specious argument that Chinese resources are to be utilized in the construction of the line, both the capital and the material being furnished by the country itself. His plan for raising the funds by contributions from the various interested provinces was about as feasible as that for extracting iron from Chinese ore for the manufacture of steel rails; and both dropped out of sight the moment the scheme received the Imperial sanction.

This political trick is common to all countries. One party succeeds to power by promising heaven and earth, and then does exactly what the party engaged had been doing. This is Chang-Chih-tung's case. But there are many difficulties in the way more serious than the raising of funds and the purchase of material, and something more than literary artifice will be required to overcome them. The real opposition of the populace, gentry, and officials has not yet been tested, for the Tung-shan line traverses a sparsely populated country, where the military forces of the Viceroy dominate everything. The "Great Western" as it has been rather happily named by the N. C. Daily News, will pass through the turbulent populations of Southern Chihli, Honan, and Hupé, where especially in Honan, foreigners and foreign things are held in cordial detestation. The line is not a commercial, nor even a strategic one, but rather a line of least resistance—in inception; it can never, until a revolution has been effected by its means, be remunerative. It is a wise prescience doubtless which moves the older Viceroy to leave the burden of his own creation on the shoulders of his more ambitious, but less experienced colleague.—Chinese Times.

NOTES FROM CHINESE PAPERS.

The Kuang-pao reports the near completion of the bunding of the river outside Canton City. The length is 120 chang, or about 1,400 feet, commencing eastward from the temple of Kuan Yin, near the South Gate, and ending at the West end, at the entrance of Tai-hong Street. There will be a large wharf or jetty made about the centre of this bund, measuring something like 250 feet in width; this will be used especially for the convenience of officials landing at Canton.

The Wai Sun reports that the great fire of the 1st inst. at Fochow totally destroyed about nine hundred and seventy houses, leaving something like from fifteen to sixteen hundred families homeless. His Excellency Liu Jui-fen, Chinese Minister to the Court of St. James's, reports to the T'ung-shan Yamen that the total amount of expenses for the first year of his embassy reaches over eighty-six thousand taels. This report has been presented to the Board of Revenue and duly passed.

Lien Chow has been visited lately by a band of about two hundred disbanded soldiers, to the great annoyance of the natives. A short time ago a body of twenty men went to the river side, where a number of boats lay, and demanded five hundred cash from each boat which they required, as they said, to pay their passages home. The boats which contained a number of men on board, only gave, and that under compulsion, fifty cash for each boat, whilst those on which were only widows and orphans had to pay three times that amount to the black-mailers. The matter getting to the ears of the Sub-Prefect, that official at once posted a proclamation ordering those worthless to leave the city of Lienchow within three days on pain of being arrested as marauders.

PROSPECTUS.
THIS Company is formed to purchase and enlarge the Cement Works known as the "Société Française de Fabrication des Ciments & Chaux Hydrauliques & Produits Chimiques du Tonquin" situated at Hongay.

The property is held under a concession from the French Government and is of 60 acres in area with sea frontage and is admirably situated, having an approach where vessels of any size can anchor easily. There is also a practically inexhaustible supply of lime and other materials required for cement making on the spot. Coal, the principal item, is to be had near and cheap. As a matter of fact veins of coal have been discovered on the property to be purchased by this Company. It may be stated that the Charbonnages du Tonquin's property is immediately opposite that of this Company.

Highly satisfactory reports on the cement and hydraulic lime have been given by the French Government and local authorities here, and these can be seen at the offices, where samples also may be had. Samples are now being submitted to the Government for approval. Whilst this Cement is considered as good as that supplied by the Green Island Company, as regards cost it is cheaper.

The cost price is $1.25 a cask in Haiphong and $1.50 here. It can be sold in Indo China for about $5.20 a cask and in Hongkong at $1.50.

Without taking into consideration the Hongkong market, there is consumed in Indo China alone, according to official reports, 21,000 casks per annum.

There are no legal objections to an English Company working the concession, with its Head office in this colony.

The purchase money has been fixed at $83,000, of which $25,000 is taken in shares. This includes a large stock of raw material, coal, cement, lime and bricks. Should the Company at any time increase its capital, one fully paid up share is added to the purchase money for every ten shares issued. With the present capital the Company will be able to turn out 50,000 casks of cement a year, as well as hydraulic lime, fire bricks &c., in large quantities. The following contracts have been entered into:

(1) Contract dated 27th July 1889 between C. VEZIN of the one part and ARTHUR B. RODYK of the other part.

(2) Contract dated 6th August 1889 between ARTHUR B. RODYK of the one part and J. A. BARRETTO as Trustee on behalf of the Company of the other.

These together with the Memorandum and Articles can be seen at the Solicitor's office. Applications for shares must be made on the printed form, and forwarded to the Bankers (where share forms may be obtained) together with the amount payable on application.
